

JUNE IS MONTH OF MANY CRUEL WARS

Great Battles of History Fought This Month, Many of Which Took Place on Soil of Old Virginia.

June stands out conspicuously in world history as a month of battles. In view of the possibilities in the intensified campaign abroad, reference to some of the events which have marked the month in other years is interesting, says the World.

Naturally the first great dates coming to mind are those of our own Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775, and of Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo, June 18, 1815.

It was also on June 18, that the United States declared war on England in 1812.

The Alabama-Kearsarge battle, ending with the sinking of the famous Confederate warship, occurred June 19, 1864.

In our revolution the battle of Monmouth took place June 28, 1778, and on the same day in 1776, the battle of Fort Mifflin, at Charleston, was fought.

Among our civil war events of June were the capture of Memphis, June 6, 1862; the opening of the seven days before Richmond, June 26, 1862; the Battle of Cold Harbor, June 1 to 3, 1864; Winchester, June 13-15, 1863; Lynchburg, June 17-18, 1864; Mechanicsburg, June 26, 1862, and the Gaine's Mill, next day; siege of Petersburg, June 15, to 30.

In the war of 1812, the Shannon-Chesapeake naval battle took place June 1, 1813, with victory for the British ship.

June 14, 1865, witnessed the Battle of Naseby—the final defeat of Charles I. by Cromwell; June 14, 1800, was the date of Marengo; June 14, 1807, saw the Russians overthrown by Napoleon at Friedland; June 14, 1809, Napoleon beat the Austrians at Raab.

June 25, 1876, Custer and his men were killed by the Indians in the Little Big Horn.

JUNE.

Through Europe's war-swept spaces, Walking with tarnished shoon O'er silent, upturned faces, There comes a saddened June, No little white flowers meet her; Only the vivid red And scarlet blossoms greet her, That root where men have bled.

The lips that whispered trifes, To welcome her are dumb; She hears the voice of rifles, The rattle of the drum. From where the sweet wild grasses Once grew, there comes the smell Of heavy, acid grasses, Like fumes escaped from hell.

She sees the ocean folding, Upon its bosom deep, Many a mother holding A child in endless sleep; And women who fell screaming Before the blood mad clans, To find, in their long dreaming, Earth's heart more soft than man's.

She hears the cannon's thunders; She hears the labored breath Of boys who gaze in wonder Upon the face of death. She sees the torn oblations That human folly flings On altars of its nations To feed the pride of kings.

Through Europe's war-swept spaces, Walking with tarnished shoon O'er silent, upturned faces, There comes a saddened June, No little white flowers meet her; Only the vivid red And scarlet blossoms greet her, That root where men have bled.

"The Kinston Free Press," says the Times Dispatch, will have to answer for this one: "J. Naiman, of Heritage, and Blount Streets, found an eel two feet long in the gutter in front of his home this morning. Mr. Naiman calls attention to the fact that it rained tremendously Wednesday afternoon and some that night." The reporter got there, Eely, with both feet.

Scientists have shown that the only way to judge of the human mind is by human conduct. If this be true, Germany's attitude towards the world indicates beyond question that she should be crushed and blotted from the face of the earth.

A. C. BREWSTER DEAD.

The town was saddened yesterday morning when the news became current that A. C. ("Uncle Fuller"), Brewster, one of the oldest citizens, as well as the oldest resident, of Welch, had died at nine o'clock, after an illness extending several weeks. For several years Mr. Brewster had been in declining health, and for this reason he and his wife have spent the winters in Florida, where they past winter they went south returning here in April, and Mr. Brewster had been growing more feeble all along, until a few weeks ago he was forced to take his bed. He was attended by Drs. Daniels and Hall, assisted by several of the other physicians of the town, and everything in the power of human hands was done to save him, but to no avail. For several days he had been in a state of coma, and not since Saturday had he recognized any of his family. All relatives had been notified, and his wife and children were at his bedside yesterday morning when death came.

The deceased was sixty-four years of age. He was born in Tazewell County, moving to Welch about twenty years ago. During his stay here, he was deputy sheriff and jailor, as well as mayor of the town. He entered into the mercantile business and at the time of his death was largely interested in a number of enterprises in the county. When but a very young man he married Miss Mary Jane Daniel, sister of Dr. S. A. Daniel, of Welch, and the wife and four children—C. D., of Welch; R. G., of Tazewell; J. D., of Dry Fork, and Dr. G. W. Brewster, of Davy, survive him.

Services will be conducted this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the residence by Rev. J. N. Harman, of Tazewell, a life-long friend, and Rev. T. J. Houts, of the Welch Methodist church. The remains, accompanied by relatives and friends, will be taken to North Tazewell Wednesday morning on No. 18, and from that point will be taken to Horsepen Cove, and the funeral services concluded at the Christian Church cemetery.

The above is taken from the Welch letter in last Tuesday's Telegraph.

The funeral and burial took place on Wednesday from the Christian church in Horsepen Cove. Mr. Brewster was well and favorably known in Tazewell. His son, Dr. G. W. Brewster, was a citizen of this town for some time, engaged in the practice of his profession.

REVIVAL MEETING TO BEGIN JUNE 13

Famous Georgia Evangelist Is Coming for Protracted Services—Schedule of Preliminary Arrangements.

It is expected that Rev. L. B. Bridges, of Gainesville, Ga., will be at the Methodist church in Tazewell, June 13th, to begin a series of revival services. Rev. Mr. Bridges is well known in this section, he having held a meeting of splendid results at the Bland Street Church, Bluefield, in the winter. He is recognized as a fine preacher and singer and is one of the few men appointed as evangelist by the church at large. His style and manner is said to be pleasing while convincing and it is believed the Tazewell people will hear him gladly. He will be accompanied by his sister, Mr. Cordell, Huntington, W. Va. It is not known whether Mrs. Bridges will assist her husband in this meeting or not. If so, her singing and piano playing will add a feature of much merit to the services.

While the evangelist is a Methodist and the services are to be conducted in the Methodist church the earnest co-operation of all other ministers and church members is urgently solicited as the meeting is regarded in the light of a community affair. It is hoped that all the pastors of the town with as many of their members as possible will attend every service. The general public is most cordially invited to come to every service. The choirs of all the churches and all singers are kindly invited to give their aid in making the music under the directions of the visiting leader.

The revival spirit is abroad in the land and with the faithful cooperation of the people and the direct influence of the Divine Spirit it is expected that Tazewell will have a manifestation of this wonderful power. Preliminary services will be held according to the following schedule in the Sunday school room of the Methodist church the week preceding the 13th of June.

Monday night, 8 o'clock, Rev. R. B. Platt, Jr.

Tuesday night, 8 o'clock, Rev. C. R. Brown.

Wednesday night, 8 o'clock, Mrs. Mary O'Keefe.

Thursday night, 8 o'clock, Rev. D. P. Hurley.

Friday night, 8 o'clock, Three talks of ten minutes each by Rev. W. S. Bullard; Rev. W. W. Arrowood and Rev. Thos. H. Campbell.

These services are considered to be very important and it is hoped large numbers will attend every night. The choirs are asked to come to these meetings and lead the singing.

Since the roads are so good and automobiles and other conveyances are so convenient it is thought probable that people living at considerable distance from town will lend their presence to the services regularly.

METHODIST CHURCH SUNDAY

Sunday is communion day at the Methodist church. The pastor, Rev. R. B. Platt, Jr., will preach. Mrs. A. S. Higginbotham has kindly consented to sing a solo. There will be good music by the choir. Every one is cordially invited.

The regular services will be held at North Tazewell Sunday night at eight o'clock.

The adult class for men and women recently organized at North Tazewell is increasing in interest and the lesson for next Sunday is especially interesting. Mr. F. H. Forbes is the efficient teacher. You will probably help as well as be helped by enrolling as a regular member.

JOHN MILLARD DEAD.

Mr. A. M. Millard, of this town, received the sad intelligence last Sunday of the death of his brother, Mr. John Millard, which occurred at his home near Mendota on Sunday morning. He died of pneumonia, and left a wife and a large family of children. Mr. A. M. Millard had just recently returned from a visit to his bedside. Deceased was a life-long member of the Baptist church, a good man, whose life was filled with good works. On parting with his brother he said, "We'll meet no more on earth, but I hope to meet you in heaven." Another brother, Richard, is very low at his home in the same community.

HE HELPS BEST WHO HELPS QUICKLY: DO YOUR DUTY.

The following statement, issued by the Executive Board of the Sheltering Arms Hospital of Richmond, Virginia, contains a message to the entire Virginia public:

"At the end of the year in which the demands of the hospital have been equal to its utmost efficiency, as well as a year of great financial depression, the management finds itself facing a deficit of four thousand dollars, with no resources to relieve its indebtedness.

It is believed if this appeal shall be responded to by every man, woman and child, who have in the past twenty-six years, received help at this institution, and by their influence secure small gifts of quarters, half dollars, and dollars, or less or more, as they are able, that this deficiency will be wiped out.

This appeal is not to be made to those perennial friends of the institution, who have made semi-annual gifts for many years, though we know these will help within their power, but is made primarily to the wide Virginia public, who must be interested in relieving the destitute sick without money and without price.

The past year has a record of 681 patients, all entirely free, and 16,500 hospital days.

The maintenance of this institution is largely dependent upon voluntary gifts of friends. No pay patients are received here, nor are those able to pay treated within the walls.

The hospital is now filled to its utmost capacity, forty applicants waiting, and many more expected during the summer months.

The board of lady managers are facing a serious problem and are threatened with the closure of this most worthy and valued institution, unless aid is promptly received.

If each one who reads this statement will send some gift, large or small, to Mrs. Geo. T. King, treasurer, or Miss Frances B. Scott, President, it will be promptly acknowledged and gratefully received.

WHAT BILLY SUNDAY SAID ABOUT THE HUDSON.

Hood River, Ore., Aug. 29, 1914.

Dear Kincaid:

I am resting out here on my apple ranch and have not written many letters, and would not have written this one, only I recall the promise I made to you to write.

I liked the old Hudson "33" but the little six-40 is a wonder, so neat and attractive in design and has power enough for these hills. We have driven the car all over the Eastern range of the Cascade mts., and she has never failed to take the hills or bring us home.

Love to all.

GOVERNOR STUART ADDRESSES VETS.

Makes Speech of Welcome to the Thousands Assembled in Reunion in Richmond, Once Capitol of Confederacy.

Richmond, Va., June 1.—Thousands of veteran survivors of the Confederacy in reunion here today trudged through torrents of rain to cheer to the echo the hopes expressed by their leaders that peace in America may not be disturbed by the war in Europe. Grizzled veterans of the gray, enthused in the twenty-fifth annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans reiterated their loyalty to the union, shouted themselves hoarse in pledging support to the President of the United States in any crisis, and bowed assent to prayers that those who guide the destinies of the Republic might be blessed with wisdom to deal with pending international affairs.

More than five thousand of the sturdy followers of Lee are here, and at the opening session of their reunion shared their plaudits alike for the rollicking air of "Dixie" and martial strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," while the Star and Bars and the Stars and Stripes flared from the housetops of the old Capitol of the Confederacy.

It was a day of tribute to their own departed heroes and one of fervent hope that their sons may never have to experience the baptism of fire that was theirs. This sentiment, uppermost in the addresses of the day, brought the veterans to their feet repeatedly at convention hall.

Address of the Governor.

The Southern hosts were welcomed to Richmond by Governor H. C. Stuart, Mayor Ainslie and Judge D. G. Tyler, who spoke in behalf of the veterans of Virginia.

Governor Stuart said:

"Fifty years ago the sun of the Confederate States of America had just gone down in the clouds of darkness. The capital city prostrate, a mass of blackened walls and smoldering ruins, the men and women who had borne with heroic fortitude four years of siege and suffering, with the last shots of the Confederacy yet ringing in their ears, were laying in the ashes of buried hopes the foundation of the nobler and stater city in which we are now assembled. The smoke of conflict scarce lifted, the blood of heroes not yet dry on the battlefield, the exhausted survivors of a hundred victories turning their backs for the first time to the foe, were wending their way footsore and as the first recorded expression of the nation's will on the issues which had torn us asunder.

A Hearty Welcome.

"But I am not here to revive the unhappy differences of the past, but to welcome the survivors of those sombre days and right royally do we welcome you to our ancient Commonwealth.

"To the Daughters of the Confederacy, the memorial association, sponsors and maids of honor, I extend a cordial greeting. Your hands have built the monuments to our dead and have ministered to the living, and you have preserved inviolate the truth of history. The gallant knight prizes the rewards of victory chiefly that he may lay them at his lady's feet. Therefore, to you belong the trophies of both peace and war. We glory in the traditions of Southern womanhood and in your grace and beauty I find the assurance that you have maintained its standards and ideals. Welcome as the flowers of springtime, sweeter than its most fragrant blossoms, are the matrons and maidens assembled to honor the men who wore the gray. Sons of Veterans, may you prove worthy of your sires and of the smiles of these fair Daughters.

"Veterans, all of you are partakers in the glory of the armies of the Confederacy. Your swords and bayonets made the shining ladder by which our leaders rose to fame, your fortitude was the bulwark upon which rested their triumph, your loyalty their solace in defeat, whether you hail from the Lone Star State where Virginia blood reddened the Alamo, or from the western empire which Jefferson added to our country, from the blue grass where Daniel Boone defied the Indians, the Atlantic Seaboard, the Appalachian highlands or the shores of the Pacific, the Old Dominion rejoices that you meet today within her borders.

"As pilgrims go to Mecca, so patriots come to Mount Vernon to receive the name of Washington, or to Monticello to venerate the author of the Declaration of Independence, or gather on yonder hill where Patrick Henry sounded the war cry of the Revolution, or kneel at our holiest shrine at Lexington, Virginia, guards the dust of the immortal dead, but you are joint heirs with us in our priceless inheritance, and we claim an equal share in the renown of your great sons, your statesmen and warriors, who have shed lustre upon every page of American history.

"You are welcome as no other men upon the globe could be welcome, for you are in Richmond, for whose defense your bodies formed a living rampart, Richmond, the war-time home of Robert E. Lee; Richmond in whose shadow reposes Jefferson Davis surrounded by the sorried ranks of the heroic dead; Richmond, whose streets are today a Sacred Way which you tread as conquerors, not laden as Roman legions with the spoils of successful warfare, but crowned with unfading laurels, crowned with all honor and glory, best loved citizens of a proud and grateful Southland, whose valor is the most precious memory of a people who waged an unequal struggle against overwhelming numbers and boundless resources.

"By the proud title of Confederate soldiers, again I bid you welcome to our State, our capital and our hearts."

THE WAR AT NORTH TAZEWELL.

North aTzwell, Va., June 3.—The cold weather has been welcomed by two elements of the population of North Tazewell, that is to say and to wit: the cut worms, which are to the farmers and gardeners what the sub-arctics are to the honest sailorman, and that numerous class of our people who want to postpone death, taxation, and the use of the electric company's ice, (for purposes of refrigeration only) till the snow flies.

Another class far less numerous, but louder, the Germanias of the town, are just now inquiring "what they will do to be saved in case this country gets into war with the country of their choice.

They have been "officially informed" that they will be "interned" for the period of the war and kept out of mischief by our armed guard, the guards to be selected from native Germans, now resident Americans, who have lived in Germany and known enough about the "pure cussedness" of that country to sympathize with "any other" nation.

There are only two of these, these Germanias, and since they are rivals in business and don't like each other any too well, any how, the boys are already planning joyrides to the "camp" to see the fun.

Sparking of joyrides—one was pulled off last night—a lot of our boys made an incursion to a neighboring pleasure resort and singularly enough the petrol tank went dry at Dry Town and there they were. Nothing could daunt their youthful exuberance, however, not even a tramp to town for fuel for the engine.

Whether they got to Tip Top in time for the dance or got into a free fight at Burke's Garden switch, can only be guessed at, but their appearance this morning justifies the latter theory.

The subject of the street lights was up again last night and it was determined that they would not be put in commission until the city is freed from all fear of a Zeppelin raid.

So, no more at present.

JOHN.

Mr. J. C. Porter, one of Tazewell's old and well known citizens, died at his home in Roanoke on last Monday, after an illness of several years. Mr. Porter was in his fiftieth year of age, and his death came as a great shock to his family as he had been able to go about and look after his work up to the time of his death.

Funeral services were held at the residence on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Seiber, the pastor, in the presence of a very large crowd of people. The burial took place in the Fairview cemetery. Besides a wife, five children survive—A. Z., W. J., H. W., Mrs. C. Mahood, of Graham, and Mrs. E. M. Young, of Roanoke.
